The Washington bureau issued its final hurricane bulletin, estimating the center of the tropical storm at 9 a. m. (EST) to be in extreme northeastern Texas, about 50 miles northwest of Shreveport, La.

With the disturbance moving northward about 15 miles an hour, intensity had diminished considerably and winds within a 300-mile radius of the center did not exceed 35 miles an hour.

Damage reports indicated that losses would top the 50 million dollar mark. The damage in Florida was estimated at 30 million dollars.

Smashing winds of 100 miles an hour punished New Orleans for 90 furious minutes yesterday. The raging hurricane. (Continued on Page Two)

STASSEN FAVORS BUYERS' STRIKE ON FOOD PRICES

SPRINGFIELD, Mass., Sept. 20—Harold E. Stassen advocated today a "buyer's strike" in food.

In an interview and in an address before the New England members of the Grange at the eastern states exposition the only avowed candidate for the Republican presidential nomination declared the "most critical problem facing the country is the inflationary price wage spiral."

He said: "The only way to stop it is by bringing down the price of food."

He told the Grangers: "The most sensible manner to do this is for the President to initiate promptly a nationwide, coordinate, voluntary, save-the-food program."

He elaborated on this in an interview, saying: "I am opposed to restoring government price regulation and to rationing. I advocate a buyers' strike limited to food."

SEARCHERS FIND WRECKAGE OF ARMY TRANSPORT

MANILA, Sept. 20—U. S. Army search planes "definitely" identified today the wreckage of a United States Army air transport plane which crashed shortly after midnight on Luzon island after running out of gas in the midst of a heavy storm.

The plane was bound from the island of Okinawa to either Clark or Nichols fields, near Manila. Unconfirmed reports reaching Manila said that the search planes had seen a number of men north of the crash who might be survivors.

It was reported that practically all aboard parachuted to safety. The Army would not confirm each reports.

INVESTIGATING the entire agricultural situation, members of a Senate agriculture and forestry sub-committee assert high prices of food and other vital items will continue to plague the nation until next June. GRAIN PRICES Europeans Cut Needs To DROP SHARPLY Only 22 Billion Dollars

Third Straight Day Of Dips Recorded On Chicago Market

CHICAGO, Sept. 20 — Grain prices registered a spectacular drop in dealings on the Chicago board of trade today.

Corn futures were down the allowable eight cents limit within a few minutes after the opening of trading, wheat was off from 7 3/4 to 9 3/4 cents a bushel, and oats were off from 3 3/4 to six cents.

Soy beans dropped from six to eight cents.

ON THE Minneapolis and Kansas City exchanges prices dropped precipitately, and Winnipeg rye was down five to 7 1/2 cents a bushel.

On the Chicago market, all deliveries of corn were down the limit for the third successive day.

Despite the plummeting prices, there was little buying. The reaction the latter part of this week after the days of skyrocketing prices to new records was attributed to uncertainty over possible action on the government's request for increased margin requirements; favorable crop news, and the public's demand for lower food prices.

FAIR AND WARM WEATHER DUE OVER WEEKEND

By International News Service A weekend of fair and warm weather with temperatures above normal for the season was predicted today for Ohio.

The U. S. weather bureau said there would be some cloudiness today and tomorrow with occasional showers a possibility.

A little cool air from Canada spilled over into the Lake Erie region last night for cooler weather in the northeastern part of the state than residents elsewhere enjoyed.

However, temperatures today were expected to climb into the middle 80's for the day's highest readings. So far this month there have been only two days with below normal recordings, and the weather bureau could foresee no return in the immediate future.

Chesapeake reported the highest mercury reading yesterday, a 92. Cleveland's 89 tied the all-time record for Sept. 19, set in 1932. The average in the state's largest city topped the normal by 13 degrees.

POLICE CALLED

SALEM, Ind., Sept. 20 — Indiana state police were ordered into Salem today in a move to strike possible rioting at the curb-bound Smith Cabinet company plant.

PARIS, Sept. 20—The European committee on the Marshall plan sliced its list of needs today to 22 billion dollars, but aid from the United States may total only 10 and one-half billion.

A highly reliable source said that representatives of the 16 co-operating nations agreed to the 22 billion sum, and will sign its report in Paris on Monday.

The committee will submit the 22 billion dollar figure to the United States as the estimated trade deficit of western Europe during the next four years.

HOPE WAS expressed, however, that aid from the international bank and loans from private investors will lighten the burden of the U. S. government in carrying the continent through its economic crisis.

The committee has set its sights on the international bank as a source for the three and one-half billion dollars that would be used in obtaining capital machinery necessary for the cooperative revival program.

Committee members hopefully expect to receive five billion dollars in private loans during the next four years.

They also counted on a three billion dollar favorable trade balance with nations other than the United States by the end of the crisis period.

Fulfillment of all expectations would reduce to ten and one-half billion dollars the aid needed from the U. S. government.

Foreign Minister Georges Bidault of France, dapper and smooth-spoken, delivered one of the most significant policy pronouncements to the thousand delegates heard since the assembly convened five days ago.

In wheeling French policy into open conformity to the Marshall plan and further away from Russia, Bidault levelled deft shafts at Soviet Russia and categorically denied that the purpose of the U. S. economic plan is to enslave Europe.

U. S. Secretary of State Marshall listened somberly as Bidault point by point, rejected the Russian attitude on the European situation and expressed regret at the Soviet Union's refusal to join in the sixteen-power effort to rehabilitate Europe.

COLUMBUS, O., Sept. 20 — Governor Herbert ordered the state liquor department today to crack down on reported shake-downs of persons seeking tavern and night-club permits.

The governor said information he had received indicated a widespread "racket" was being operated throughout the state. The governor asserted that the racketeers were asking as high as $7,000 for services in helping applicants get the permits.

The D-3 and D-5 permits were moved from a war-time freeze on Sept. 15. At present, approximately 1,000 applications are being screened by the liquor department.

Lt. Floyd C. Moon, acting enforcement chief, stated he had assigned 40 inspectors who had contact every applicant to ferret out evidence of shake-downs.

Both cars were badly damaged.

Mrs. Updyke and daughter, Miss Dorothy Updyke, who is shorthand reporter in common pleas court, had planned to leave early next week on a trip to California.

Mr. Updyke was removed to the hospital in an ambulance.

Mr. Wolfe was reportedly unhurt.

Fiorello H. LaGuardia, 'Champion of the People', Dies After Long Illness

NEW YORK, Sept. 20—Fiorello H. LaGuardia, former mayor of New York, lawyer, statesman and "champion of the people," died peacefully in his sleep at 6:23 a. m. (EST) today in his Riverdale home after a prolonged illness. He was 64.

The stormy petrel of domestic and international politics, whose antics and garrulousness made him one of the most colorful political personalities of his era, died without rallying from the coma into which he lapsed last Tuesday night.

Members of his immediate family and a handful of loyal friends and associates of his reign as chief executive of the world's largest city were present at his bedside.

These included his widow, the former Marie Fisher of Washington, who had served as his confidential secretary and adviser during his 30 stormy years in public life and their two adopted children, Erik, 15, and Jean, 18.

LAGUARDIA had been seriously ill since last June 18 when he underwent an operation for a pancreas condition which confirmed existence of a cancer.

He gradually lost weight and shrank to a mere shadow of his former size.

It was not until yesterday, however, that his physicians abandoned hope for the man who served seven terms in congress and three as mayor of New York.

"BUTCH," or "Major," as he liked to be called, was the "Bar-num" of modern day politics.

Only five foot five, he was a "human firecracker" in his daily routine. He achieved a brilliant career by violating almost every rule in the book for successful politicians.

During his life he was a pilot in World War I, a congressman, a radio commentator, a hard-spoken diplomat and head of the U. S. Conferences of Mayors—all these in addition to his three terms as mayor of New York and his later job as UNRRA director general.

His gamut ranged from picking fights with the rich, famous and powerful to reading comics for the kiddies over the city-owned radio station when New

TEACHERS BACK TOLEDO WIVES FIGHT ON PRICES

TOLEDO, O., Sept. 20—Three Toledo teachers' groups endorsed today the price-fighting efforts made by the Housewives League, Inc.

The action followed a charge by Mrs. J. L. Senn, president of the league, that four Toledo teachers slammed their telephone receivers down when called to participate in the chain-telephone campaign to lower food costs.

Mrs. Senn asserted the action would be remembered by the women voters next November when the teachers would seek approval of a levy to increase their salaries.

Special Session Of Senate Committee Called To Study World Scene

BULLETIN

WASHINGTON, Sept. 20 — Sen. Bridges (R) N. H., chairman of the senate appropriations committee, said today that the United States must assume the financial burden of the British occupation zone in Germany.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 20—The senate appropriations committee was called into special session today to discuss "grave foreign and domestic problems."

Sen. Bridges (R) N. H., committee chairman who convened the unusual Saturday meeting, declared he did so because "critical international conditions necessitate immediate action."

HOWEVER, some members who arrived early for the session were inclined to feel that the purpose of the meeting was largely to permit the committee to obtain the latest information on the European situation before part of the group takes a trip overseas Oct. 8.

Secretary of the Army Royall was slated to appear before the committee at its closed meeting and it was anticipated that he would discuss Great Britain's proposal that the United States

'EYE BUSTERS' GANG ARRESTED AT CINCINNATI

CINCINNATI, Sept. 20 — Four youths were bound over to a grand jury in Cincinnati today on charges they belonged to a gang that gouged the eyes of robbery victims.

Police called the gang the "eye busters" and said they knocked out one man's eye and inflicted injuries to another victim that may cause loss of sight of one eye.

Municipal Judge Frank M. Guswiler was told by police that the quartet admitted eight robberies.

The men were booked as Samuel War, 20, Carroll Coomes, 19, and Vernon Moore, 21, all of Cincinnati, and Robert Stewart, 18, Crittenden, Ky. Ware's bond was set at $3,000, while the others were held under $1,000 bond.

FOOD EXPERTS STUDY PLANS TO GIVE TRUMAN

President, Home From Trip, Calls White House Staff Meeting

WASHINGTON, Sept. 20—Secretary of Agriculture Anderson today ordered an unusual Sunday conference of his food experts, in preparation for Monday's top level White House conference on the record high prices at home and the grave shortages overseas.

Anderson returned to Washington only an hour after President Truman reached the White House after his 20-day trip to Brazil. The secretary, back from a western tour, immediately set the stage for an all-out drive to solve the food-price problem.

The cabinet member disclosed that he will take up the situation with Mr. Truman immediately after a meeting Monday morning of the cabinet food committee, of which he is chairman, and of which Secretary of State Marshall and Secretary of Commerce Harman are members.

Anderson said that Secretary of Defense Forrestal also will attend the food-price meeting.

MEANTIME, the chief executive called a White House staff meeting at which he received reports on inflationary pressures, the European famine threat, and the increasingly delicate Russian question.

Anderson revealed that the agriculture department is studying the extent of grain used in beer and liquor production.

He said the survey was not being made with a definite plan in mind to seek authority to ban grain sales to brewers and distillers, but that the department was just "looking into" the matter.

The secretary added that whisky production requires a "considerable amount" of corn, although wheat does not figure importantly in the alcohol picture.

ANDERSON, in announcing the extraordinary Sunday session, affirmed his belief that the United States has enough food not only for home consumption

RENO, Nev., Sept. 20 — Sen. Robert A. Taft (R) O. carried his presidential pulse-feeling tour into Nevada today, convinced that if he gets any 1948 nominating support from California it will be at the will of Gov. Earl Warren.

Taft motored to Reno from San Francisco, where he laid down his own program for halting price increases in his final and major California speech.

The senator speaks in Reno tonight on reclamation and labor, with the emphasis on the former, an issue vital to the water-conscious West.

Politically, Taft confirmed what has been apparent to leading Republicans for months—that California's delegation to the Philadelphia presidential convention next June will be committed to Governor Warren, a "favorite son" with powerful appeal in the West.

Fiorello H. LaGuardia, 'Champion of the People', Dies After Long Illness

NEW YORK, Sept. 20—Fiorello H. LaGuardia, former mayor of New York, lawyer, statesman and "champion of the people," died peacefully in his sleep at 6:23 a. m. (EST) today in his Riverdale home after a prolonged illness. He was 64.

The stormy petrel of domestic and international politics, whose antics and garrulousness made him one of the most colorful political personalities of his era, died without rallying from the coma into which he lapsed last Tuesday night.

Members of his immediate family and a handful of loyal friends and associates of his reign as chief executive of the world's largest city were present at his bedside.

These included his widow, the former Marie Fisher of Washington, who had served as his confidential secretary and adviser during his 30 stormy years in public life and their two adopted children, Erik, 15, and Jean, 18.

LaGuardia had been seriously ill since last June 18 when he underwent an operation for a pancreas condition which confirmed existence of a cancer.

He gradually lost weight and shrank to a mere shadow of his former size.

It was not until yesterday, however, that his physicians abandoned hope for the man who served seven terms in congress and three as mayor of New York.

"BUTCH," or "Major," as he liked to be called, was the "Baron" of modern day politics.

Only five foot five, he was a "human firecracker" in his daily routine. He achieved a brilliant career by violating almost every rule in the book for successful politicians.

During his life he was a pilot in World War I, a congressman, a radio commentator, a hard-spoken diplomat and head of the U. S. Conference of Mayors—all these in addition to his three terms as mayor of New York and his later job as UNRRA director general.

His gamut ranged from picking fights with the rich, famous and powerful to reading comics for the kiddies over the city-owned radio station when New

TEACHERS BACK TOLEDO WIVES FIGHT ON PRICES

TOLEDO, O., Sept. 20—Three Toledo teachers' groups endorsed today the price-fighting efforts made by the Housewives League, Inc.

The action followed a charge by Mrs. J. L. Senn, president of the league, that four Toledo teachers slammed their telephone receivers down when called to participate in the chain-telephone campaign to lower food costs.

Mrs. Senn asserted the action would be remembered by the women voters next November when the teachers would seek approval of a levy to increase their salaries.

The Toledo Teachers' association, the Toledo Federation of Teachers and the Principals and Supervisors club, in a joint statement, declared:

"No group is more interested that the teachers in stopping the present inflationary price situation to keep down the high cost of living.

SOLONS MEET IN WASHINGTON

Special Session Of Senate Committee Called To Study World Scene

WASHINGTON, Sept. 20 — Sen. Bridges (R) N. H., chairman of the senate appropriations committee, said today that the United States must assume the financial burden of the British occupation zone in Germany.

He said the survey was not being made with a definite plan in mind to seek authority to ban grain sales to brewers and distillers, but that the department was just "looking into" the matter.

The secretary added that whisky production requires a "considerable amount" of corn, although wheat does not figure importantly in the alcohol picture.

ANDERSON, in announcing the extraordinary Sunday session, affirmed his belief that the United States has enough food not only for home consumption (Continued on Page Two)

JOHN AYERS, 17, LATEST VICTIM OF POLIO HERE

Ailment of John Russell Ayers, 17, son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Ayers, Washington township, Route 4, Circleville, it was disclosed Saturday, has been diagnosed as infantile paralysis. The youth is in St. Anthony's hospital at Columbus.

This increases to 10 the number of poliomyelitis victims recorded this year in Circleville and Pickaway county.

Dr. A. D. Blackburn, county health commissioner, revealed that John Russell Ayers' sister, Nancy Louise Ayers, 3 1/2 years old, was stricken a few weeks ago with polio but that she has practically recovered without hospitalization.

Notification of the diagnosis of infantile paralysis in the case of John Russell Ayers was also received by Don Henkle, chairman of the county unit of the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis.

FOOD EXPERTS STUDY PLANS TO GIVE TRUMAN

President, Home From Trip, Calls White House Staff Meeting

WASHINGTON, Sept. 20—Secretary of Agriculture Anderson today ordered an unusual Sunday conference of his food experts, in preparation for Monday's top level White House conference on the record high prices at home and the grave shortages overseas.

Anderson returned to Washington only an hour after President Truman reached the White House after his 20-day trip to Brazil. The secretary, back from a western tour, immediately set the stage for an all-out drive to solve the food-price problem.

The cabinet member disclosed that he will take up the situation with Mr. Truman immediately after a meeting Monday morning of the cabinet food committee, of which he is chairman, and of which Secretary of State Marshall and Secretary of Commerce Harriman are members.

Anderson said that Secretary of Defense Forrestal also will attend the food-price meeting.

MEANTIME, the chief executive called a White House staff meeting at which he received reports on inflationary pressures, the European famine threat, and the increasingly delicate Russian question.

Anderson revealed that the agriculture department is studying the extent of grain used in beer and liquor production.

He said the survey was not being made with a definite plan in mind to seek authority to ban grain sales to brewers and distillers, but that the department was just "looking into" the matter.

The secretary added that whisky production requires a "considerable amount" of corn, although wheat does not figure importantly in the alcohol picture.

HEART ATTACK FATAL TO WOULD BE FOOTBALL STAR

COLUMBUS, O., Sept. 20—A 15-year-old high school freshman's dream of becoming a great football star was ended today with his death.

Clarence Karnes collapsed on the football field of nearby Reynoldsburg last night and died within a few moments of a heart attack.

The school physician previously had ordered that he not play but granted permission for him to put on a uniform when the youth's disappointment was so evident. The heart attack was suffered before last night's game.

but to meet relief requirements abroad.

But he emphasized that both domestic consumption and relief allocations must be "juggled" to meet the unbalanced supply. He explained:

"We have enough for foreign and domestic needs, but it is not always the kind of food we'd like."

"If we are going to ship wheat and corn only, we'll develop a grain shortage. But there are other foods we can ship that would be just as satisfactory."

AS AN EXAMPLE, he cited a small sugar surplus in Puerto Rico, created by the fact that some European nations were unable to buy their full allotments.

He suggested that this sugar could be channeled to Germany, where it would aid in relieving the food shortage and permit re-channeling of some German supplies to other countries.

The secretary observed:

"Sugar may not be the most convenient food to ship, but it has plenty of calories."

He declared that "nobody should have to starve."

ANDERSON SAID there was little prospect of milling restrictions leading to a return to wartime "gray bread."

He said the grain saving resulting from such a move would not be worth the trouble re-institution of controls would require.

The cabinet member contended that production is the only positive solution to soaring food prices.

He pointed out that the time is "pretty late" for a return to government price controls or rationing and said there would be almost insurmountable obstacles for any agency attempting to put such machinery in motion.

Anderson declared he favored "anything that will take speculation out of the grain market," including a tightening of margin requirements in grain trading.

HE PREDICTED a further drop in the wheat market. He said speculators are beginning to realize that an over-supply may be near, Anderson added:

"There's another tremendous grain crop coming. The market is likely to react with a frightful bang before long."

"We've got a yearly crop of one billion 400 million bushels and we only use half of it ourselves. Relief demands aren't going to continue forever."

The meeting is expected to result in definite recommendations to be presented to the President, quite possibly including a voluntary rationing program as advocated by Secretary of Commerce Harman and other government officials.

The committee, it is believed, also will call for a drastically lowered ceiling on grain exports.

Observers do not believe that the President's intensive consideration of the allied problems of domestic high prices and overseas shortages will result in reinstatement of wartime governmental controls.

THE BUREAU of labor statistics reported that the latest consumer price index for July 15, 1947—is estimated at an all-time high of slightly above 158 (the period 1935-39 equals 100).

The reports said that retail prices of consumer goods and services in July were about 12 percent higher than a year ago, and 61 percent above August, 1939.

Retail food prices in 56 cities showed a new high of 193.1 percent above the 1935-39 average. Higher prices for eggs, dairy products and meats were the chief factors in the price rise.

The bureau said that retail prices of living essentials used by moderate-income families in large cities advanced approximately one percent from mid-June to mid-July. Prices for all major groups of items except apparel advanced; apparel was estimated to have decreased more than one-half of one percent.

Earlier this week, the bureau announced that wholesale prices for farm products and food were at an all-time high, as of last Saturday.

York City underwent a newspaper delivery strike.

BORN IN a tenement house on New York's lower east side on Dec. 11, 1882, the son of a former Army bandmaster, LaGuardia was frequently mentioned by a group of new dealers as a possible running mate for Henry Wallace on a third party ticket in 1948.

LaGuardia, who was a graduate of the New York University law school in 1910, had encountered only three political setbacks in a career which dated back to 1903 when he started as a civil service appointee in the American consulate at Budapest.

In the 14 times he sought political office, he ran on nine different tickets and said he didn't need any of them as he could have been elected "on a laundry ticket."

Ostensibly a Republican, he was registered with the American labor party and was the official New York Roosevelt campaign manager with a private wire to the White House.

"WHEN WORLD War I arrived, LaGuardia, who learned to fly in his odd moments, was commissioned a major and placed in charge of our air forces in Italy. His Caproni bomber, "The Congressional Limited" wrought such havoc that German and Austrian fliers were ordered to make it a special target.

On his return from the wars, the pint-sized congressman spent the next ten years getting on the nerves of bigshots—defeating Andrew Mellon's pet tax program; denouncing President Coolidge in a deal whereby Henry Ford would get Muscle Shoals—and bedeviling prohibitionists.

When he was elected mayor in 1933, his fire-chasing antics and denunciation of "tin horn gamblers" won him a world-wide audience. He gave the nation a chuckle when Hitler began throwing his weight around by assigning 12 Jewish policemen to guard the Nazi consulate.

During his 12 years as mayor of New York, LaGuardia frequently made the headlines by his fight for virtue. He closed up burlesque houses, fought ticket brokers, put all nightclubs "on probation", cancelled theater licenses and jailed their operators.

His major frustration, apparently, was a crimp in his military career. He bought uniforms, assured of a commission as brigadier general in World War II; then was ruled "more useful" as mayor of New York and U. S. director of civilian defense.

FOOD EXPERTS STUDY PLANS TO GIVE TRUMAN

but to meet relief requirements abroad.
But he emphasized that both domestic consumption and relief allocations must be "juggled" to meet the unbalanced supply. He explained:
"We have enough for foreign and domestic needs, but it is not always the kind of food we'd like."
"If we are going to ship wheat and corn only, we'll develop a grain shortage. But there are other foods we can ship that would be just as satisfactory."

AS AN EXAMPLE, he cited a small sugar surplus in Puerto Rico, created by the fact that some European nations were unable to buy their full allotments. He suggested that this sugar could be channeled to Germany, where it would aid in relieving the food shortage and permit re-channeling of some German supplies to other countries.
The secretary observed:
"Sugar may not be the most convenient food to ship, but it has plenty of calories."
He declared that "nobody should have to starve."

ANDERSON SAID there was little prospect of milling restrictions leading to a return to wartime "gray bread." He said the grain saving resulting from such a move would not be worth the trouble re-institution of controls would require.
The cabinet member contended that production is the only positive solution to soaring food prices.
He pointed out that the time is "pretty late" for a return to government price controls or rationing and said there would be almost insurmountable obstacles for any agency attempting to put such machinery in motion.
Anderson declared he favored "anything that will take speculation out of the grain market," including a tightening of margin requirements in grain trading.

HE PREDICTED a further drop in the wheat market. He said speculators are beginning to realize that an over-supply may be near. Anderson added:
"There's another tremendous grain crop coming. The market is likely to react with a frightful bang before long."
"We've got a yearly crop of one billion 400 million bushels and we only use half of it ourselves. Relief demands aren't going to continue forever."
The meeting is expected to result in definite recommendations to be presented to the President, quite possibly including a voluntary rationing program as advocated by Secretary of Commerce Harrison and other government officials.

The committee, it is believed, also will call for a drastically lowered ceiling on grain exports.
Observers do not believe that the President's intensive consideration of the allied problems of domestic high prices and overseas shortages will result in reinstatement of wartime governmental controls.

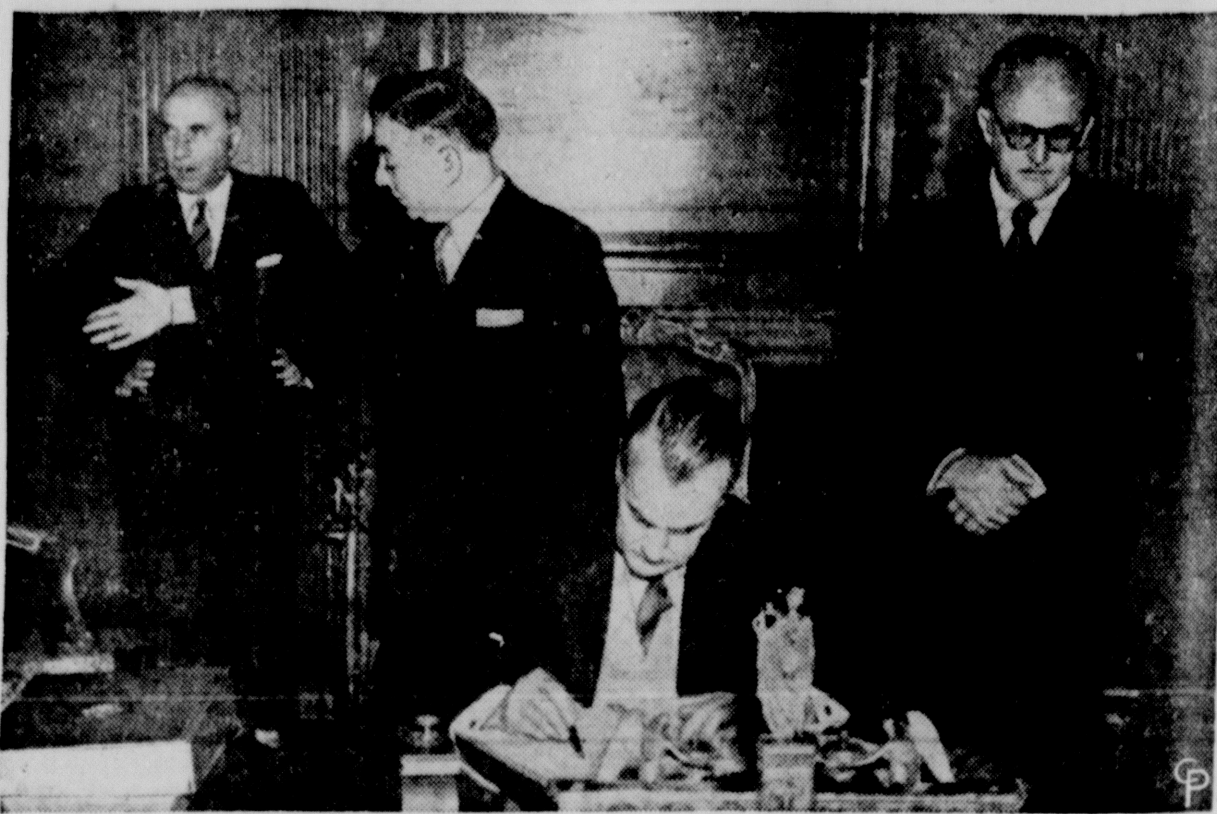

THE BUREAU of labor statistics reported that the latest consumer price index—for July 15, 1947—is estimated at an all-time high of slightly above 158 (the period 1935-39 equals 100).
The reports said that retail prices of consumer goods and services in July were about 12 percent higher than a year ago, and 61 percent above August, 1939.

Retail food prices in 56 cities showed a new high of 193.1 percent above the 1935-39 average. Higher prices for eggs, dairy products and meats were the chief factors in the price rise.
The bureau said that retail prices of living essentials used by moderate-income families in large cities advanced approximately one percent from mid-June to mid-July. Prices for all major groups of items except apparel advanced; apparel was estimated to have decreased more than one-half of one percent.

Earlier this week, the bureau announced that wholesale prices for farm products and food were at an all-time high, as of last Saturday.

York City underwent a newspaper delivery strike.

BORN IN a tenement house on New York's lower east side on Dec. 11, 1882, the son of a former Army bandmaster, LaGuardia was frequently mentioned by a group of new dealers as a possible running mate for Henry Wallace on a third party ticket in 1948.
LaGuardia, who was a graduate of the New York University law school in 1910, had encountered only three political setbacks in a career which dated back to 1903 when he started as a civil service appointee in the American consulate at Budapest.

In the 14 times he sought political office, he ran on nine different tickets and said he didn't need any of them as he could have been elected "on a laundry ticket."

Ostensibly a Republican, he was registered with the American labor party and was the official New York Roosevelt campaign manager with a private wire to the White House.

"WHEN WORLD War I arrived, LaGuardia, who learned to fly in his odd moments, was commissioned a major and placed in charge of our air forces in Italy. His Caproni bomber, 'The Congressional Limited' wrought such havoc that German and Austrian fliers were ordered to make it a special target.
On his return from the wars, the pint-sized congressman spent the next ten years getting on the nerves of bigshots—defeating Andrew Mellon's pet tax program; denouncing President Coolidge in a deal whereby Henry Ford would get Muscle Shoals—and bedeviling prohibitionists.

When he was elected mayor in 1933, his fire-chasing antics and denunciation of "fin horn gamblers" won him a worldwide audience. He gave the nation a chuckle when Hitler began throwing his weight around by assigning 12 Jewish policemen to guard the Nazi consulate.

During his 12 years as mayor of New York, LaGuardia frequently made the headlines by his fight for virtue. He closed up burlesque houses, fought ticket brokers, put all nightclubs "on probation," cancelled theater licenses and jailed their operators.

His major frustration, apparently, was a crimp in his military career. He bought uniforms, assured of a commission as brigadier general in World War II; then was ruled "more useful" as mayor of New York and U. S. director of civilian defense.

James H. Hardesty, 78, retired farmer, died at 2:20 a. m. Saturday in his home in Salt-creek township near Whisler. Death followed a protracted illness.

Mr. Hardesty was born April 16, 1869 in Hocking county, the son of Ezra Hardesty and Mrs. Ruth Ann Hardesty. He was married Dec. 13, 1891 to Ida Belle Gatwood, who survives him. Mr. Hardesty was a member of the Colerain church.
Besides his widow Mr. Hardesty is survived by five daughters, Mrs. Elvia Rhoades, Chillicothe; Mrs. Martha Nungesser, Kingston; Mrs. Altha Rosier, Hallsville; Mrs. Margaret Koch, Circleville; and Miss Effie Hardesty, at home; four sons, Herman Hardesty, Ashville; Stanley Hardesty, Circleville; and Charles Hardesty and Dewey Hardesty, both at home; a sister, Mrs. Bertha Russell, Circleville; three brothers, Wilmer Hardesty, New Plymouth; John Hardesty, Chillicothe; and Newton Hardesty, Circleville; and 31 grandchildren and 17 great-grandchildren.

Funeral services will be conducted at 2:30 p. m. Monday at the Hallsville United Brethren church with the Rev. Mr. Thornton officiating. Burial will be in the Hallsville cemetery under direction of the L. E. Hill funeral home, Kingston. Friends may call at the Hardesty residence after 9 a. m. Sunday.

ITALIAN TROOPS ALERTED FOR COMMUNIST COUP

ROME, Sept. 20—Italian troops and police were alerted today for a possible left-wing revolt coincident with Communist "hunger marches" scheduled throughout the nation.

Widespread fear of a revolution, coming on the heels of a paralyzing strike by two million farm and metal workers, led interior minister Mario Scelba to issue a somewhat qualified reassurance in which he said:

"At the present state of affairs, I believe that conditions for an armed coup are lacking because there is a decided determination to oppose it and the forces to fight it are not lacking."
Scelba then hedged, saying: "Few in Italy believe the Communist party has excluded from its program a violent conquest for power and the establishment of a dictatorship."

'The Sum Of All Things' Subject For Presbyterians

"The Sum Of All Things" is the topic chosen by the Rev. Donald Mitchell for the message from the pulpit at the Presbyterian church Sunday, at 10:30 a. m. "This should be of particular interest at the opening of the school year as we wonder what it is all going to add up to in the future," the pastor said. Special music will be presented by the choir directed by Mrs. Melvin Kiger. Miss Abbe Clarke will play "Toccata" from Organ Suite by Rogers; "Panis Angelicus" by Franck; and "Postlude" by Raff. The pastor will launch a special Bible Study course entitled, "A Christian's Working Knowledge of the Bible," at the Sunday school hour where classes for all ages are offered. All are cordially invited to share in Bible study and worship, and in the other activities of the church.

'Seminary Day' To Be Observed Sunday

Sunday will be known as "Seminary Day" at Calvary Evangelical United Brethren church. This is the day set aside each year which is a day of prayer for the theological seminaries and life work recruits. Upon this day the attention of the churches is drawn particularly toward the call, training and work of those who are to go into full-time Christian service. As his sermon topic of the morning the pastor has chosen "For Each A Burning Bush," referring this title not only to the ranks of the clergy, but the laity alike. The special number of the morning will be a vocal duet by C. O. Leist and J. A. Herbst, accompanied by Miss Minnie Wilkerson, entitled "God's Way." At the evening service after the singing of gospel songs and choruses the pastor will bring the message entitled "Twentieth Century Lamp Lighters."

Flatbush Dutch Reformed Church

This church dates back to the year 1654 — almost 300 years ago. Its first house of worship was a wooden frame structure, which was in use from 1654 to 1699.

The second church stood for almost 100 years. Its bell sounded the alarm in the Battle of Long Island, when the British were still at some distance from the village. During the battle, the church was pressed into service as a hospital for the wounded. American soldiers who fell in the struggle are buried in the church graveyard.

The third structure was built in the year 1797. Its bell was molded in the foundry at Amsterdam "Seest". It bears the inscription, "John Vanderbilte gave the bell to the Dutch Church in Flatbush, A. D. 1796."

The last pastor, the 18th, the Rev. J. Frederick Berg, recently resigned. He was said to be a collateral descendant of Peter Stuyvesant's wife, Judith Bayard.

The modern church faces the busiest corner in Flatbush. It is flanked by banks, restaurants, moving picture theatres and commercial enterprises. To obtain a satisfactory photograph of the church, eliminating the business places near its front door, it was necessary to take the picture at the rear of the structure. Will the commercial life of Flatbush crowd out this old church, rich in the history of our country? What will its future be? Such an institution, a living force since before the Revolutionary War, seems too symbolic of all that has made America great, to allow financial considerations to take away its historic heritage.

RAISING THE IQ

A YOUNG Chicago woman, now teaching in Indiana State Teachers College in Terre Haute, has succeeded in disproving many long-accepted theories about the educability of feeble-minded children. By the use of her own unorthodox teaching methods she has actually raised the I Q's of a group of adolescent children from a mean of 51 to normal, according to an article in a current woman's magazine.

Bernadine Schmidt was given charge of special classes in a Chicago public school and given a free hand as to methods. Her first approach was social, and after glaring physical defects were taken care of, she taught her pupils the proper care of hair, skin, and clothing to improve their personal appearance. She was uncritically affectionate in her dealings with them, making them feel useful and competent. This innately sympathetic teacher found that many of her charges were suffering from fright, from feelings of inferiority, and from paralyzing shyness. Modern progressive school methods were used in teaching academic subjects, and the results were so good that 27 per cent finished high school, and all but seven per cent reached normality, holding useful jobs.

This teacher is now engaged in training others to carry on this work, a project which should give hope to many parents. Children whose lives have been blighted by the idea that their condition makes them permanent outcasts, may, with understanding treatment, become valuable citizens.

This is not a new approach; it has long been known that sympathy, understanding, careful, patient teaching and the placing of as much responsibility on such a child as he is able to take will improve his status. But it is a fresh reminder that most of such cases are not hopeless. They may never become normal, but they can be trained to become far better and happier than they are.

VETERANS' DUTY

THE VETERANS were going to make over America, but are they? In a recent special election for a Congressional seat in Pennsylvania, 11,000 were eligible to vote. How many registered? Not more than 1,000, according to reports, and not all of this meager number may have voted.

The New York Times correctly remarks that here is a prime duty for the American Legion, the Veterans of Foreign Wars and similar organizations to teach this elementary duty of citizenship to their members and see that it is carried out. Otherwise when the veterans ask for legislation they desire and point to the importance of the former service man's vote, the legislator would be quite justified in replying "Oh, yeah?"

There's probably enough human nature in this world to equip another planet, but apparently nobody making much use of the surplus.

'ROUND CIRCLEVILLE Hour by Hour

Pages From the Diary of An

Antiquated Reporter:

Up to a blaze of gorgeous Fall sunshine, the kind that adds zest to life. Soon outdoors where did remain until second call to breakfast. Tarried briefly over coffee and did travel downtown singing, or what passes for that with me. Everywhere smiles and tokens of good will. Strange how weather affects people. Found the plant in full swing and soon was on Budd Harden to find him up to his chin in book work. Stopped long enough to invite me on a pond fishing trip next week and to accept my acceptance. Says he knows where there are some fine bass not too far from the ville. And he probably does, for Budd sticks closer to the truth than most fishermen.

Ran into Walter Richards and learned that work of constructing the dam for Memorial lake will get under way about the 27th. State funds for the project will be available on that date and the contract let at once. We'll have water in that lake come this time next Fall, but I doubt as much as some of the promoters think. That is, unless we have more of the type of goose downers we had last Spring and early Summer. The central post-war problem of Europe is not Germany but Great Britain. No matter where one's sentiments may be, the present plight of Great Britain leaves Europe without the economic leadership to which that continent has become accustomed for many centuries. Pro-Britishers in this country complain that those who do not fervently expect Great Britain to emerge more powerful than before simply disregard the fact that two wars have left that country economically flat, that the Empire is mostly gone as a supporting bastion and that the future rests upon American cooperation and subsidy which may or may not come in the particular form Britain desires.

Winston Churchill said: "The National Government, of which I was the head, had won the war. It was for the Socialist Government to win the peace. And it was for them to make the most of the remaining resources of the nation, to heal the wounds of war, to maintain our position in the world, and to give some measure of happiness and reviving prosperity to the men and women who had fought so well. . ."

Then he added: "Unhappily, these men, called to the august task of setting the country on its feet again, were obsessed and dominated by party faction and class prejudice, and they cared far more for pleasing their own extremists than solving the grim troubles of the aftermath which beset us all. I do not blame them so much for the mistakes they have made, many and grievous though they may be. I blame them for their wrongful choice, in caring more for their party theories and dogma than about the revival of our strength. . ."

Unfortunately for England, her Socialists picked the wrong time for vast reforms, reorganizations and the remaking of a people. The Socialists, for some reason, assumed that the United States would underwrite these experiments no matter what they cost. They are surprised that this country asks for facts and figures, for accounts, for specific data. They entered upon their revolution believing that they would have a blank check on the American treasury.

Churchill had no such illusions. He said of the Socialist schemes:

"I do not believe that any of these methods will aid us in our economic crisis. The arrival of unwilling workers in industries to which they are strangers may well do more harm than good. Efficient arrangements for the steady and selective supply of raw materials would give far more fruitful results in a great many industries and over the whole field. Rarely, if ever in history, have the noble and altruistic qualities to which Mr. Attlee appealed been developed in the human race by compulsion.

On the contrary, it is from resistance to tyranny in all its varied forms that the qualities which dignify and glorify mankind have sprung to life. . ."

Backache May Result From A Great Variety of Causes

By HERMAN N. BUNDESEN, M.D.

PERHAPS the only ailment with more causes than backache is headache.

Thus, if ten patients complaining of pain in the lower part of the back come to the doctor's office, the chances are that in each case the pain will come from a different source, and that each patient can be relieved only by a different treatment.

Due to Strain

In one, the backache may be due to strain of the joints in the lower part of the spine brought about because habitual poor posture has bent the spine to one side. In another, the doctor may find a malformation of the spine which has been present since birth.

Of course, injuries are a well known cause of back pain. These injuries may affect the vertebrae or small bones in the spine. Arthritis or inflammation of the joints in the spine may develop following injuries.

Pressure on Nerves

Pressure on the nerves coming from the spine and consequent severe pain may occur from several different causes such as the slipping of bits of cartilage between the vertebrae known as intervertebral disks.

Disorders of the spine itself, such as arthritis, changes in the bones, tumor growths and infections all may be responsible for severe backache.

Among the infections which may affect the spine, are tuberculosis, gonorrhea, typhoid fever, and undulant fever or brucellosis.

Another Cause

Another common cause of backache is fibrositis, a condition in which there is inflammation of the connecting or supporting tissues around the muscles.

It should also be remembered that it is not unusual for backache to be produced by disorders affecting the kidney, the bladder, and the organs of reproduction, and in men, the prostate gland.

In women, during middle life, long continued strain in the lower part of the back is commonly seen. It is usually worse after prolonged standing. Tiredness, as a rule, makes the aching worse.

Flat Feet

These same symptoms may be produced by flat feet. Abnormal forward bending of the spine called lordosis may be a cause of low backache. The discomfort in such cases is always made worse by standing and walking. As a rule, it is worse at the end of the day.

Overweight frequently is associated with this kind of backache and may even be responsible for producing it.

Thus, when the patient has backache, the first thing the doctor does is to get a complete story of the symptoms; when they first started, where the pain is located, and how often it occurs. Then a complete physical examination is given and X-rays of the spine are taken.

Too Soft a Bed

Many low backaches occur or are made worse by sleeping in a bed that is too soft or that sags in the middle, thus keeping the spine from relaxing in the normal position. In such cases, the patient is usually awakened by the pain early in the morning. On arising the pain is worse but wears off towards the middle of the day.

Those who suffer from pain in the lower part of the back should not delay in having a careful study made to determine the cause.

Where low back pain is concerned little or miss methods will accomplish little. Those who suffer from pain in the lower part of the back should not expect relief without a careful study to determine the cause and since so many of these disorders may have serious consequence if left untreated, there should be no delay in having such a study made.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

C. W.: At one time I had tuberculosis. Eleven years ago I lost my voice, never regaining it. What would cause this condition?

Answer: Complete loss of the voice might be due to damage to the nerves which supply the larynx or voice box, or to destruction of the vocal cords in the larynx. Also, there is a condition called laryngeal atrophy, which might be responsible. Careful examination by a throat specialist may be needed to determine the cause in your case.

CHAPTER TWENTY-FIVE
THE ROOF, of hand-cut shingles, had given away in places, but the logs were sturdy, and inside the floor of the big main room was fairly sound, though that in the bedroom would have to be replaced. The kitchen was in bad repair, but with a newly acquired housewife's knowledge, Gail saw its possibilities.

While Greg and Charles estimated the necessary repairs, Gail, Norah and Kate moved about the rooms, planning and discussing. Gail's color burned and her eyes sparkled with eagerness.

"There is some furniture you can have in the attic," Kate told her. "It will need polishing, of course, but it's quite sound and substantial. We can make new slip covers and curtains, and you can have a nice little place."

Gail barely restrained a little childish skip of excitement and her eyes danced with delight.

"I'll feel like Alice in Wonderland," she crowed. "Imagine—a place of my own!"

There was wonder and awe in her voice and Kate and Norah exchanged a swift, compassionate glance. There was something very touching to them in Gail's delight over the shabby, dilapidated little place. Her simplicity had made them see with a sharp clarity the insecurity of her life before she had come to them.

When they came again into the hot sunshine, Charles and Greg were arguing vigorously, and Greg was saying sternly, "There's no use in arguing about it any more, Uncle Charles. If Gail thinks she can be happy here and comfortable, then I'll find a way to fix it up. But not with the money in the bank and the return from the crops. I've got a few bucks of my own tucked away; I can get more. And I can do the work myself."

Gail's eager face fell a little, and she all but held her breath as she watched Charles. He was studying Greg with a curious intensity that, somehow, lost all belligerence and suddenly became warm and smiling.

"You win, son," he said at last. "It's natural you want to be independent, but I thought a wedding gift to my daughter—"

"The furniture you've offered, and the other stuff, sir, that's a very handsome wedding gift and we'd like very much to have it," said Greg.

Gail drew a deep breath and clenched her hands tightly together, and there were tears in her eyes as she beamed at Greg.

"For a minute," she told him honestly, "I thought you were trying to wriggle out of marrying me—and I was scared!"

The frankness of that made them all laugh a little, and Greg said, easing the tension with attempted flippancy, "Oh, no. I'm hooked and I know it. It wouldn't do me any good to fight."

Gail grinned at him implacably. "I'm so glad you admit that now," she told him cheerfully. "It's going to save a lot of battles afterward."

She turned to her father, with Greg's arm about her, and said gently, "It's a darling little place, Father, and I love it. And I'd be perfectly willing to move into it just as it stands, without spending a penny, if Greg moved in with me."

Charles kissed her cheek and said, "Then that's that, chick. After all, it's your life and Greg's. We oldsters have no right to try to impose our will upon you. You've a right to make your mistakes, if you like, and remedy them in your own way!"

Gail drew a long breath and flung up her head, sniffing happily at the summer fragrance of the deep woods and the coolness from the dark river.

"We are going to be so terribly happy here," she said contentedly. "Oh, darling, darling, aren't we the luckiest two people in the whole wide world?"

Gail had had a few hastily scrawled postal cards from her mother, with South American postmarks, and a hasty note or two. There had been no indication that Gail's first letter, describing the conditions she had found at Twin Oaks, had caught up with Lissa.

The Bermuda house party, Gail gathered from the hasty notes, had been a huge success; so much so that some of the guests had gone on to other southern ports. Martin had chartered a yacht and they were having "a too, too marvelous time," according to Lissa. Their return to the States was very indefinite. There was some talk that they might go on to Rio, or come back through Mexico; but the tone of the brief notes and the cards indicated that Lissa was quite confident and happy.

Later, Gail admitted with shame that there were whole days when she forgot all about her mother. Forgetting everything that had existed in her life before she had come to Twin Oaks. She was so busy and excited and happy in getting the little house ready for occupancy.

It was midsummer by now and the field work had lessened, so that she and Norah and Kate could put in more time getting things straight. Greg worked through the days, reshingling the house, putting down new floors, and painting.

The time sped by on silver wings and Gail was happier than she had ever dreamed she could be. There was no thought of a trousseau; she had brought with her so many lovely things that had been hanging untouched in the closet, and her new life as Greg's wife would call for far more practical garments, which Kate and Norah helped her make.

PLAYING the percentages is the bedrock foundation of good bridge, in both the bidding and the play. It is exemplified no more clearly than in the option of declarer to favor a finesse—ordinarily a 50-50 chance—as against trying for the even break of six outstanding cards in a suit, against which the odds are approximately 60 to 40. But developments in the bidding or the early play can show either that the suit is quite likely to break evenly, or that the finesse is quite likely to lose. That alters the odds by some important amount.

Gail had been astounded when Kate had brought out from a store-room one morning an armful of printed cotton cloth, and had said, "I've been saving feed sacks for a long time, and being very careful to always see that when we bought a sack of chicken or cow feed the patterns matched in at least three places."

Gail stared at the little heap of washed and folded squares, and then looked up at Kate.

"Feed sacks?" she asked incredulously.

Kate laughed richly.

"Of course, darling," she answered lightly. "It's much better material than you can buy at the stores nowadays. The patterns are nice, and the cloth is soft and durable. Norah and I—and practically all our friends—wear dresses made of feed sacks the year round."

She held up a length of cloth with a white background patterned with small clusters of purple violets with green leaves.

"Three matching pieces make a dress," Kate explained. "And I've been careful to see that we had at least three pieces of each pattern. And where we run short—well, we'll combine with something else."

Gail gave a little delighted yelp of mirth.

"Feed sack trousseau! What a lovely idea! Kate, you're a lamb—but I'll divide them equally so we can all have new frocks and be right in style."

Kate twinkled at her.

"Last summer, when Norah rebelled against feed sacks and insisted on a brand new store-bought dress, she and I shopped the Atlanta stores, and in half a dozen instances found dresses priced at six to eight dollars made of material exactly like some we had at home!"

And so Kate's sewing machine hummed, and Kate and Norah cut and basted and fitted and made buttonholes. Kate proved to have an excellent hand at making slip covers, and there were old trunks in the attic that divulged unexpected largesse in the shape of usable material that Kate's ingenuity could turn into decorative things for the little house.

Gail had written Lissa of her approaching marriage and her plans and had sent her letter on to the bank in New York that handled Lissa's trust fund and income, to be forwarded to Lissa. And late one afternoon, when she was cramped and tired from sitting so long over her sewing, she volunteered to go for the mail.

Norah was downstairs somewhere and Gail left Kate finishing up a last bit of sewing before stopping to cook supper. Gail went down the weed-grown drive to the highway, where the rural route man left the mail in a battered old box.

heart 5 to the K. East the 2 to the J and A, then West the 10 to the Q.

At one table the declarer, noting that he had four certain tricks in clubs, two in spades and one each in the red suits, saw two ways to try for the ninth trick. One was to play for the split in spades to set up a third-trick. The other was to finesse the diamond Q. He attempted the latter and, when it failed, he was down one.

Morrie Ellis, who has won almost all of the national events, made his contract at the other table. He decided that West's lead of the heart 10 to the third trick was for the purpose of leaving himself a smaller card than East for the fourth heart trick, as a re-entry to East's hand. Why did West do that? Mr. Ellis decided it was so that East could lead a diamond through South. Hence West probably had the diamond K and the finesse would fail. So, from the fourth trick on, he ran three clubs, leaving the A in dummy, took two top spades, gave up a card, which East won because West had unblocked, used his A on the diamond return, led to the club A and scored the spade 7 for the game trick.

Your Week-End Question

Why do fine players say a grand slam is the easiest contract of all to play, when it is the right contract, that a small slam is the next easiest, that a game is still harder and that a part-score contract is the hardest of all?

RAISING THE IQ

A YOUNG Chicago woman, now teaching in Indiana State Teachers College in Terre Haute, has succeeded in disproving many long-accepted theories about the educability of feeble-minded children. By the use of her own unorthodox teaching methods she has actually raised the I Q's of a group of adolescent children from a mean of 51 to normal, according to an article in a current woman's magazine.

Bernadine Schmidt was given charge of special classes in a Chicago public school and given a free hand as to methods. Her first approach was social, and after glaring physical defects were taken care of, she taught her pupils the proper care of hair, skin, and clothing to improve their personal appearance. She was uncritically affectionate in her dealings with them, making them feel useful and competent. This innately sympathetic teacher found that many of her charges were suffering from fright, from feelings of inferiority, and from paralyzing shyness. Modern progressive school methods were used in teaching academic subjects, and the results were so good that 27 per cent finished high school, and all but seven per cent reached normality, holding useful jobs.

This teacher is now engaged in training others to carry on this work, a project which should give hope to many parents. Children whose lives have been blighted by the idea that their condition makes them permanent outcasts, may, with understanding treatment, become valuable citizens.

This is not a new approach; it has long been known that sympathy, understanding, careful, patient teaching and the placing of as much responsibility on such a child as he is able to take will improve his status. But it is a fresh reminder that most of such cases are not hopeless. They may never become normal, but they can be trained to become far better and happier than they are.

VETERANS' DUTY

THE VETERANS were going to make over America, but are they? In a recent special election for a Congressional seat in Pennsylvania, 11,000 were eligible to vote. How many registered? Not more than 1,000, according to reports, and not all of this meager number may have voted.

The New York Times correctly remarks that here is a prime duty for the American Legion, the Veterans of Foreign Wars and similar organizations to teach this elementary duty of citizenship to their members and see that it is carried out. Otherwise when the veterans ask for legislation they desire and point to the importance of the former service man's vote, the legislator would be quite justified in replying "Oh, yeah?"

There's probably enough human nature in this world to equip another planet, but apparently nobody making much use of the surplus.

AFFAIRS continue to move into advanced grooves of accomplishment and constructive channels in all contacts and relationships, largely by determination, aggressive means and well-established techniques pushed to high tempo by enthusiasm and sustained by "the will to win." While hard work, ingenuity and skill play a leading role, yet realism is supported by some more subtle factors of the imagination, intuition or other less tangible implement for gratification and pleasure. A "hunch" may prove to be a "missing link" in securing the final result.

Those whose birthday it is may find themselves impressed into high grooves of achievement and sound purpose, attaching creative plans with ingenuity and unswerving effort in new and ambitious projects. Such will and determination may flash the vision of rare attainment with its concomitant benefits.

CHAPTER TWENTY-FIVE
THE ROOF, of hand-cut shingles, had given away in places, but the logs were sturdy, and inside the floor of the big main room was fairly sound, though that in the bedroom would have to be replaced. The kitchen was in bad repair, but with a newly acquired housewife's knowledge, Gail saw its possibilities.

While Greg and Charles estimated the necessary repairs, Gail, Norah and Kate moved about the rooms, planning and discussing. Gail's color burned and her eyes sparkled with eagerness.

"There is some furniture you can have in the attic," Kate told her. "It will need polishing, of course, but it's quite sound and substantial. We can make new slip covers and curtains, and you can have a nice little place."

Gail barely restrained a little childish skip of excitement and her eyes danced with delight.

"I'll feel like Alice in Wonderland," she crowed. "Imagine—a place of my own!"

There was wonder and awe in her voice and Kate and Norah exchanged a swift, compassionate glance. There was something very touching to them in Gail's delight over the shabby, dilapidated little place.

Her simplicity had made them see with a sharp clarity the insecurity of her life before she had come to them.

When they came again into the hot sunshine, Charles and Greg were arguing vigorously, and Greg was saying sternly, "There's no use in arguing about it any more, Uncle Charles. If Gail thinks she can be happy here and comfortable, then I'll find a way to fix it up. But not with the money in the bank and the return from the crops. I've got a few bucks of my own tucked away; I can't do more. And I can do the work myself."

Gail's eager face fell a little, and she all but held her breath as she watched Charles. He was studying Greg with a curious intentness that, somehow, lost all belligerence and suddenly became warm and smiling.

"You win, son," he said at last. "It's natural you want to be independent, but I thought a wedding gift to my daughter—"

"The furniture you've offered, and the other stuff, sir, that's a very handsome wedding gift and we'd like very much to have it," said Greg.

Gail drew a deep breath and clenched her hands tightly together, and there were tears in her eyes as she beamed at Greg.

"For a minute," she told him honestly, "I thought you were trying to wriggle out of marrying me—and I was scared!"

The frankness of that made them all laugh a little. Greg said, easing the tension with attempted flippancy, "Oh, no. I'm hooked and I know it. It wouldn't do me any good to fight."

Gail grinned at him implacably. "I'm so glad you admit that now," she told him cheerfully. "It's going to save a lot of battles afterward."

She turned to her father, with Greg's arm about her, and said gently, "It's a darling little place, Father, and I love it. And I'd be perfectly willing to move into it just as it stands, without spending a penny, if Greg moved in with me."

Charles kissed her cheek and said, "Then that's that, chick. After all, it's your life and Greg's. We oldsters have no right to try to impose our will upon you. You've a right to make your mistakes, if you like, and remedy them in your own way!"

Gail drew a long breath and flung up her head, sniffing happily at the summer fragrance of the deep woods and the coolness from the dark river.

"We are going to be so terribly happy here," she said contentedly. "Oh, darling, darling, aren't we the luckiest two people in the whole wide world?"

Gail had had a few hastily scrawled post cards from her mother, with South American postmarks, and a hasty note or two. There had been no indication that Gail's first letter, describing the conditions she had found at Twin Oaks, had caught up with Lissa. The Bermuda house party, Gail gathered from the hasty notes, had been a huge success; so much so that some of the guests had gone on to other southern ports. Martin had chartered a yacht and they were having "a too, too marvelous time," according to Lissa. Their return to the States was very indefinite. There was some talk that they might go on to Rio, or come back through Mexico; but the tone of the brief notes and the cards indicated that Lissa was quite confident and happy.

Later, Gail admitted with shame that there were whole days when she forgot all about her mother. For everything that had existed in her life before she had come to Twin Oaks. She was so busy and excited and happy in getting the little house ready for occupancy.

It was midsummer by now and the field work had lessened, so that she and Norah and Kate could put in more time getting things straight. Greg worked through the days, reshingling the house, putting down new floors, and painting.

The time sped by on silver wings and Gail was happier than she had ever dreamed she could be. There was no thought of a trousseau; she had brought with her so many lovely things that had been hanging untouched in the closet, and her new life as Greg's wife would call for far more practical garments, which Kate and Norah helped her make.

Gail had been astounded when Kate had brought out from a store-room one morning an armful of printed cotton cloth, and had said, "I've been saving feed sacks for a long time, and being very careful to always see that when we bought a sack of chicken or cow feed the patterns matched in at least three places."

Gail stared at the little heap of washed and folded squares, and then looked up at Kate.

"Feed sacks?" she asked incredulously.

Kate laughed richly.

"Of course, darling," she answered lightly. "It's much better material than you can buy at the stores nowadays. The patterns are nice, and the cloth is soft and durable. Norah and I—and practically all our friends—wear dresses made of feed sacks the year round."

She held up a length of cloth with a white background patterned with small clusters of purple violets with green leaves.

"Three matching pieces make a dress," Kate explained. "And I've been careful to see that we had at least three pieces of each pattern. And where we run short, well, we'll combine with something else."

Gail gave a little delighted yelp of mirth.

"Feed sack trousseau! What a lovely idea! Kate, you're a lamb—but we'll divide them equally so we can all have new frocks and be right in style."

Kate twinkled at her.

"Last summer, when Norah rebelled against feed sacks and insisted on a brand new store-bought dress, she and I shopped the Atlanta stores, and in half a dozen instances found dresses priced at six to eight dollars made of material exactly like some we had at home!"

And so Kate's sewing machine hummed, and Kate and Norah cut and basted and fitted and made buttonholes. Kate proved to have an excellent hand at making slip covers, and there were old trunks in the attic that divulged unexpected largesse in the shape of usable material that Kate's ingenuity could turn into decorative things for the little house.

Gail had written Lissa of her approaching marriage and her plans and had sent her letter on to the bank in New York that handled Lissa's trust fund and income, to be forwarded to Lissa. And late one afternoon, when she was cramped and tired from sitting so long over her sewing, she volunteered to go for the mail.

Norah was downstairs somewhere and Gail left Kate finishing up a last bit of sewing before stopping to cook supper. Gail went down the weed-grown drive to the highway, where the rural route man left the mail in a battered old box.

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

By Shepard Barclay

"The Authority on Authorities"

WHEN TO SEEK A SPLIT

PLAYING the percentages is the bedrock foundation of good bridge, in both the bidding and the play. It is exemplified no more clearly than in the option of a declarer to favor a finesse—ordinarily a 50-50 chance—as against trying for the even break of six outstanding cards in a suit, against which the odds are approximately 60 to 40. But developments in the bidding or the early play can show either that the suit is quite likely to break evenly, or that the finesse is quite likely to lose. That alters the odds by some important amount.

A 8 7 6
Q 10 4
A 10 6 5
K J 7
5 4 2

(Dealer: South. Neither side vulnerable.)

South West North East
2NT Pass 3NT
This deal illustrated the logic used in important spots by some of the world's very finest players, as against those who are nearly but not quite as good. It came in a championship team game in which the bidding was identical at both tables and so were the first three tricks. West led the heart 5 to the K. East the 2 to the J and A. Then West the 10 to the Q.

At one table the declarer, noting that he had four certain tricks in clubs, two in spades and one each in the red suits, saw two ways to try for the ninth trick. One was to play for the split in spades to set up a thirteen-trick. The other was to finesse the diamond Q. He attempted the latter and, when it failed, he was down one.

Morrie Ellis, who has won almost all of the national events, made his contract at the other table. He decided that West's lead of the heart 10 to the third trick was for the purpose of leaving himself a smaller card than East for the fourth heart trick, as a re-entry to East's hand. Why did West do that? Mr. Ellis decided it was so that East could lead a diamond through South. Hence West probably had the diamond K and the finesse would fail. So, from the fourth trick on, he ran three clubs, leaving the A in dummy, took two top spades, gave up a club, which East won because West had unblocked, used his A on the diamond return, led to the club A and scored the spade 7 for the game trick.

Your Week-End Question
Why do five players say a grand slam is the easiest contract of all to play, when it is the right contract, that a small slam is the next easiest, that a game is still harder, and that a part-score contract is the hardest of all?

Thursday was the final day for clearing off the yearly agenda of the National Association of Broadcasters at its 25th annual meeting at Atlantic City, N. J. Those broadcasters whose shirts held out stayed for the finish. The rest, despairing of fresh laundry, headed for more accustomed climates. The dirty shirts are no commentary on affairs of radio broadcasting which have been washed, rinsed and rung dry in this convention. They're idle reflections on a chamber of commerce over-generous with its sun and laundry service over-taxed with 3,500 shirts a day. Fortunately, the NAB rules, regulations and decorum committee was more lenient at convention hall than the stuffed-shirt hotels that front the resort city's boardwalk and require a gentleman to be garbed to his throat collar, tie and coat. Convention hall is a tremendous $15,000,000 structure, a block long, just a hop, skip and plunge from the ocean. It can seat at one time in its various halls and meeting rooms the entire native population of Atlantic City (65,000) and about 5,000 visitors. It is "the biggest thing of its kind, but these facts are set down only to impress you with the magnitude of radio affairs at this NAB silver anniversary convention. For the average listener, much of what went on in committee rooms and general assemblies has been so much unipied hot air. It is industry talk, concerned with broadcast operations at high and low levels ranging from "directional antennas, their care and maintenance" to "disc jockey programs." But even the most casual of observers meandering through the main arena exhibit hall must have realized that home never was like it's going to be. Huge antennas, complicated mechanisms, demonstrate the potentialities of FM, facsimile and television. Just before the NAB met in Atlantic City, the FM association held its first convention in New York. There are perhaps 300 FM stations operating in the country now. Within a year, a thousand or more are expected to be broadcasting. Advice from the FM'ers to the public when you buy your next radio, make sure it has an FM band. Facsimile, newspaper by radio, is even closer to your home, the exhibitors promise. Within 30 to 60 days, depending on the availability of equipment, several facsimile stations (or will the trade decide to call them newsrooms?) will begin regular broadcasts. By the end of the year, about a dozen, scattered across country will be rolling out newspaper from a handsome radio cabinet in your living room. Television on a network basis is as yet a vague possibility for 1948, a greater possibility two, three years hence. But the equipment and technique, as demonstrated at convention hall, are only awaiting the time when the means for carrying visual broadcasting permit coast to coast broadcast. Another valuable training tip to dog owners was given on a recent Sunday's ABC "Lassie Show" by Rudd Weatherwax, owner-trainer of the famous M-G-M dog star, featured in her own airshow. This time Weatherwax told how to train a dog to "heel" or walk beside the owner. "Attach a short or training leash to the dog's collar," Weatherwax advised, "and walk the dog between you and a long stretch of solid fence or wall. Every ten paces give the command, "Heel!" The dog will soon learn to associate the command with walking beside or stopping beside its owner." As the second anniversary of his MBS series, "Your Land and Mine" approaches, Henry J. Taylor maintains his reputation as being one of the most respected figures in radio. Recently returned from Europe, where he made a post-war survey of eight countries, he continues to decry communism and glorify the American way of life. To radio Mr. Taylor has brought the results of rich and vast experience. He has covered, for newspapers and syndicates, Dumbarton Oaks, the San Francisco United Nations meeting and five presidential nominating conventions. He wears a DKE fraternity pin (University of Virginia), writes for the country's leading magazines and has four books to his credit. Besides his consuming interest in politics and economics, there is a deep abiding interest in things spiritual in Henry J. Taylor and that's why his Monday and Friday night radio talks attract a larger audience each time he goes on the air.

41ST ANNUAL SHOW TO OPEN ON OCTOBER 22

Three Free Acts Signed For Daily Presentation During Festival

Circleville's 41st annual four-day Pumpkin Show will be held Oct. 22-25 on downtown streets and officials of Pumpkin Show, Inc., sponsors of the event, declared Saturday it will be the biggest show ever held in Circleville.

Classified as one of the finest street festivals of its kind in the nation, the show will consist of four thrill-packed days of exhibits, amusement concessions, contests, parades, blaring bands, and free entertainment spectacles.

It will include the customary educational and agricultural displays, sideshows, midway fun with its ~~frills~~ and gawdy, and the 1947 Pumpkin Show will be a combination of city carnival, agricultural exposition, Mardi Gras, and community homecoming.

THE PROGRAM will include a big band festival with hundreds of youthful musicians representing many high schools, the selection of the 1947 Pumpkin Queen, prize exhibits of vegetables, fruits, grains, baked goods, canned goods, antiques, paintings, novelties, metal work, wood work, open-air contests, and prize displays in the windows of downtown retail stores.

Ned Dresbach, secretary of Pumpkin Show, Inc., announced Saturday that contracts have been signed for the presentation of three major free open-air spectacles.

One of these will be the "Three Milos", daring aerialists who work at a height of 140 feet using no nets or other safety devices. This sensational and breath-taking act appeared with the Roy Rogers Show several weeks ago at Columbus.

Another presentation will be the balancing performance of "Francisco and Dolores", known in show business as the "Latin-American Sensation". This act was also presented at Columbus with the Roy Rogers Show.

The third spectacle will be the hand balancing and table rocking act of Mel Marcus who has appeared before audiences throughout the country. He offers hilarious buffoonery when he builds and ascends a tower made of five ordinary kitchen tables.

All three free acts will be staged daily at East Main and Pickaway streets, Dresbach said.

CRIST NAMED TO COMMITTEE OF STATE BAR

Appointment of Attorney Emmit L. Crist, 103½ East Main street, as a member of the unauthorized practice of law committee of the Ohio State Bar Association, was announced Saturday by Attorney Joseph D. Stecher, Toledo, president of that organization. The announcement said the appointment was made on the recommendation of Attorney James M. Hengst, Columbus, a member of the executive committee.

Attorney Crist, former judge of the Pickaway County Court of Common Pleas, is the only Pickaway countian selected for membership on any State Bar Association committee. He was a major in the Army in World War II.

He said Saturday that while he was not fully conversant with the duties of members of the unauthorized practice of law committee, he understood that committee inquires into complaints involving the practice of the legal profession by persons not authorized to so practice. The committee conducts such investigations over the entire state. The committee is composed of 16 members.

THESE DAYS

By George E. Sokolsky

The pity of it is that the British worker's efficiency has been destroyed. I have some figures given by Mr. P. Lamartine Yates in 1937 comparing the agricultural output of British farmer and farm worker with those of other European countries and it is interesting to note that the Britisher comes out first:

Net agricultural value produced per head: Great Britain, 200, pounds; Denmark 155, Netherlands 120, Belgium 100, Switzerland 100, France 90, Germany 70.

George Winder, in the "Nineteenth Century and After," makes the point:

"Under the new agricultural bill the British farmer is to be subjected to discipline and if, in the opinion of certain monitors appointed by the state, he fails to cultivate his farm efficiently, it is to be taken from him, even though it may have been in the possession of his family for a hundred years."

When the Russians took the land from the kulaks, the world was horrified; yet British socialism proposed to do the same thing through a county agricultural executive committee which is to be a creature of the minister of agriculture. In a word, the British farmer is to be bureaucratized which means ultimately serfdom. As one studies what the British socialists are trying to do, it appears that their trend is not toward Communism but toward Fascism-to-Mussolini's type of Fascism. That would indeed be a tragic consequence of this war.

We still have to say—"No changing from other fuels to gas for heating." The Gas Company regrets this action, but it is necessary in order to protect our present customers. We would like to rush this tremendous job of bringing more gas to this area, but it takes time, hard-to-get materials and experienced manpower. We continue to work day and night, to bring more gas to your community.

However, there is a bright side to every story! GAS prices continue to be low. You, who are enjoying the comfort and convenience of Gas service today, are receiving a good sound bargain. Gas prices in general are the same today that they were five or six years ago, in spite of rising costs of production. We are working toward the day when more and more of you can profit by the use of gas for heating.

IF YOU HAVE GAS HEAT...

There is no restriction on replacing old gas equipment. Have your gas heating system checked this week. Replace old outmoded burners and furnaces with modern, efficient and dependable Janitrol and Bryant Gas heating equipment. You will be helping yourself by having a more efficient heating system and at the same time you will enjoy the comfort provided by modern gas equipment. Now is the time to replace—do not wait until cold weather. Avoid a break down this winter that will cause hardship or endanger the health of your family.

Call the Heating Department of the Gas Company and ask for a free survey of your present Gas heating equipment.

CRIST NAMED TO COMMITTEE OF STATE BAR

Appointment of Attorney Emmitt L. Crist, 103½ East Main street, as a member of the unauthorized practice of law committee of the Ohio State Bar Association, was announced Saturday by Attorney Joseph D. Stecher, Toledo, president of that organization. The announcement said the appointment was made on the recommendation of Attorney James M. Hengst, Columbus, a member of the executive committee.

Attorney Crist, former judge of the Pickaway County Court of Common Pleas, is the only Pickaway countian selected for membership on any State Bar Association committee. He was a major in the Army in World War II.

He said Saturday that while he was not fully conversant with the duties of members of the unauthorized practice of law committee, he understood that committee inquires into complaints involving the practice of the legal profession by persons not authorized to so practice. The committee conducts such investigations over the entire state. The committee is composed of 16 members.

THESE DAYS

The pity of it is that the British worker's efficiency has been destroyed. I have some figures given by Mr. P. Lamartine Yates in 1937 comparing the agricultural output of British farmer and farm worker with those of other European countries and it is interesting to note that the Britisher comes out first:

Net agricultural value produced per head: Great Britain, 200, pounds; Denmark 155, Netherlands 120, Belgium 100, Switzerland 100, France 90, Germany 70.

George Winder, in the "Nineteenth Century and After," makes the point:

"Under the new agricultural bill the British farmer is to be subjected to discipline and if, in the opinion of certain monitors appointed by the state, he fails to cultivate his farm efficiently, it is to be taken from him, even though it may have been in the possession of his family for a hundred years."

When the Russians took the land from the kulaks, the world was horrified; yet British socialism proposed to do the same thing through a county agricultural executive committee which is to be a creature of the minister of agriculture. In a word, the British farmer is to be bureaucratized which means ultimately serfdom. As one studies what the British socialists are trying to do, it appears that their trend is not toward Communism but toward Fascism-to-Mussolini's type of Fascism. That would indeed be a tragic consequence of this war.

There was an old Woman who lived in a Shoe

There isn't always room for one more!

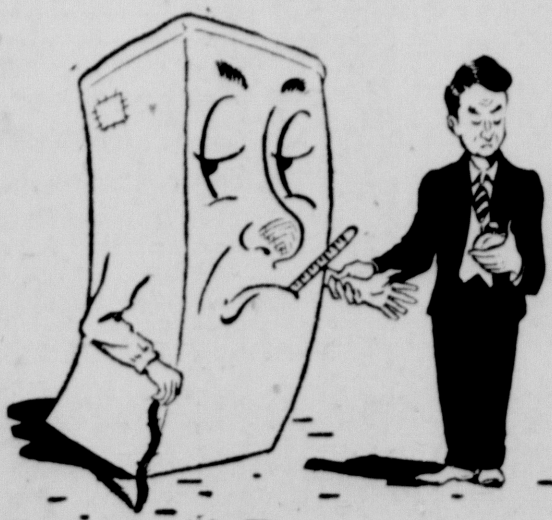

We still have to say — "No changing from other fuels to gas for heating." The Gas Company regrets this action, but it is necessary in order to protect our present customers. We would like to rush this tremendous job of bringing more gas to this area, but it takes time, hard-to-get materials and experienced manpower. We continue to work day and night, to bring more gas to your community.

However, there is a bright side to every story! GAS prices continue to be low. You, who are enjoying the comfort and convenience of Gas service today, are receiving a good sound bargain. Gas prices in general are the same today that they were five or six years ago, in spite of rising costs of production. We are working toward the day when more and more of you can profit by the use of gas for heating.

IF YOU HAVE GAS HEAT...

There is no restriction on replacing old gas equipment. Have your gas heating system checked this week. Replace old outmoded burners and furnaces with modern, efficient and dependable Janitrol and Bryant Gas heating equipment. You will be helping yourself by having a more efficient heating system and at the same time you will enjoy the comfort provided by modern gas equipment. Now is the time to replace — do not wait until cold weather. Avoid a break down this winter that will cause hardship or endanger the health of your family.

Call the Heating Department of the Gas Company and ask for a free survey of your present Gas heating equipment.
